

A recent study of Denmark Bulletin news stories by our specially designed AI has turned up amazing results! It has become clear that other than the occasional thieving tourist or the odd deliberately destructive donut from a testy testosterone tanked teen we all have nothing to worry about. Here is how the news coverage breaks down -
Poverty 0%.

Homelessness 0%

Domestic Violence 0%

Environmental destruction 0%.

If the Bulletin is to be believed then we are all doing the right thing.

Well done Denmark!

GREEDY GRAEME GETS GREEN LIT FOR LOONY LIME MINE!

GRAEME J ROBERTSON

In a 'win win' situation, for exploiters of the environment everywhere, Graeme J Robertson has got his own way due to a bureaucratic 'technicality'. Not content with living in the middle of a local natural paradise known as The Nullaki he now wishes to mine it and get a bit of bitumen laid. All for the 'collective good' he says. LOCAL CONFLICT LOOMS (Continued from page 1)

Before moving his roving developer's eye to the Great Southern, Graeme developed 'quality' housing that regional Western Australian towns in the north are famous for. Such as witnessed in Karratha, Newman and Port Hedland. He then developed the dolphin industry at Monkey Mia. He was blocked in his plans to develop Ningaloo Reef.

Graeme did not rest easy after moving to this area. The countless opportunities to turn local resources into cash have kept him busy. Local groups opposed to him have cost a small portion of his profit after insisting on local objections be heard and decisions made locally. In a number of contested developments, from Ningaloo to the Nullaki, Graeme has not had kind words to say about local interference in his money making schemes.

He has suggested that local civil servants are just upset that they can't afford the blocks on his developments and that community spaces are in his words 'just places that people dump empty coke bottles'. In a somewhat undemocratic vein he has stated the view that all 'important' tourist resources should be taken from the hands of local shires and handled by a single department in Perth. "You just need someone you can talk to" as Graeme says. Sadly for the Nullaki it looks like he found the right people to talk to.
